PREFACE.

I have selected for the first Syriac number of the "Semitic Study Series" a portion of the Julian Romance as published by GEORG HOFFMANN<sup>1)</sup>; not because of any peculiar interest that attaches to its subject-matter, but because of the excellent Syriac in which it is written, and the freedom of its language from the influence of Greek constructions. It is an original work, and probably was composed — as NÖLDEKE has shown in a learned essay<sup>2)</sup> — in Edessa and at the beginning of the sixth century. The text, though preserved in only one manuscript for the greater part of the sixth and seventh centuries<sup>3)</sup>, has come down to us only moderately deteriorated: the copyist's mistakes can be corrected with ease. It is from a text such as this that the student of Syriac writings gains some idea of the literary and rhetorical possibilities of the language — a consideration that is usually overlooked. The author writes with much warmth; and, saving a certain prolixity and verbosity, sustains the interest of the reader to the end.

Modern scholars are more apt to do justice to the Emperor Julian (331—363) than their predecessors have been. His attempt to restore Hellenism in some neo-Platonic form was bound to bring him into conflict with the Christian Church. Yet, it was part of this attempt to re-establish the principles of religious tolerance. His saying to the Christians “ut discordiis consopitis, quique, nullo vetante, religioni suae serviret intrepidus” is worthy of record; and throughout his short career he did not prove unfaithful to this principle. At a very early time, however, legends concerning Julian’s cruelties to Christians grew up around his person and his acts — the product of the antagonism that he had aroused in the opposing camp. No record of such accusations is to be found either in Libanius or in Ammianus Marcellianus, his contemporaries, or in the writings of Julian himself. They make their appearance about one hundred years after the events took place with which they are supposed to deal. In course of time these accusations developed with the increase of the craving for the history of martyrs and saints. The student may consult Rendall, The Emperor Julian, London, 1879; C. J. NEUMAN’s Edition of the Works of Julian translated into GERMAN, Leipzig, 1880; and especially Gaetano Negri, Julian the Apostate, translated by Duchess Litta-Visconti-Arese, London, 1905. A full bibliography is given in the article on Julian by K. BÖHMER in the Real Encyclopädie für Protestantische Theologie, Vol. IX, 609.

The following text contains the apocryphal history of the trials of a certain Eusebius, Bishop of Rome, which has been included in the original story as a specimen of the persecutions which the Christians had to suffer under the rule of the Emperor Julian called the Apostate. It has been pointed out that the whole Romance (aptly so called) was purported to do service in the conversion of the heathens to Christianity. Its historical value is therefore nil: as can best be seen from the facts that the EUSEBIUS mentioned as Bishop of Rome lived at the beginning of the fourth century, and that the Emperor JULIAN was never in Rome. The whole Romance originally contained: the history of Constantine and of his sons; the account of EUSEBIUS, Bishop of Rome, and his trials; and the history of Jovian during the reign of Julian. It seems curious that the text has survived in one manuscript only: it must have had more than ordinary vogue<sup>1)</sup>. It may even be conjectured that a translation was made into Arabic; seeing that it evidently forms the basis for the legendary accounts of Julian in Muhammadan histories. This has been proven as regards al-Kalbī (died 819), al-Tabarī (born 838), Ta'rikh I, p. 840; Ibn Wādiḥ al-Ya'kūbī (9th cent.) ed. Houtsma. I, p. 182; al-Mas'ūdī (ca. 915) Murūj al-Dhahab, II, p. 323; Hamzah al-Isfahānī (ca. 961), Annales p. 74; Ibn al-Athīr (born 1160) Kāmil, I, p. 283; Abū al-Fidā (born 1273), Hist. Anteislam. ed. Fleischer, p. 84 — and, of course, the ubiquitous Bar Ebrāyā (born 1226), Chronicon ed. Bedjan p. 63<sup>1</sup>).

1) Another Julian Romance exists in the Syriac Ms. of the British Museum Rich 7192. According to NÖLDEKE it belongs to either the sixth or the seventh century. See Z.D.M.G. XXVIII, pp. 660—674.

In order to fit the selection into the space at the disposal of these handbooks, it has been necessary to shorten the text. I have done this by curtailing some of the longer speeches and letters and by omitting a large section near to the end: but in such a manner as to preserve the continuity of the story. The passages selected are the following:

The title I have taken from the subscription on p. 59, 6. A few necessary changes have been made in the text: nearly all upon the basis of the corrections proposed by NÖLDEKE and HOFFMANN. The Romance has been reprinted from the same Ms. by Bedjan in his Acta Martyrum et Sanctorum, Vol. VI, pp. 218—297. I have compared his text with that given by HOFFMANN for quite a number of pages: and the latter inspires me with much more confidence than does the former. Bedjan has evidently tried to bring up the old spelling to the modern Nestorian norm.

In place of a series of notes, I have determined upon a complete glossary of the words used. Extensive notes are apt to lighten the student's work in translating. If he is compelled to look up the roots of the words he does not know, he prepares himself for his future use of BROCKELMANN's and PAYNE-SMITH's dictionaries. Some peculiar expressions will be found translated under their chief catch-word. I have not added any vowels in the text, even where a difficulty or a real doubt exists. The chief words and forms will be found transliterated in the glossary. An occassional reference has been made to the second edition of NÖLDEKE's Syrische Grammatik in order to aid the student in his understanding of a passage. The Glossary has, of course, been kept within the closest possible bounds: and the temptation to go afield studiously repressed. Only such meanings as actually occur in the text have been noted. The development of these meanings from the root idea, as well as all questions of comparative linguistics, have been left to the care of the teacher.

One of my students, Mr. NICHOLAS A. KÖNIG, has kindly given me assistance in working out the glossary.
